The hot summer of 1870 must have set

The hot summer of 1870 must have set many people thinking whether it is not possible to invent some mode of salutation more convenient than that of shaking hands. When the thermometer is at 90 in the shade, and when the only hope of oscaping a sunstroke seems to be to drink so much tea and to wear so little clothes rity as "The Sleeping Beauty," having Stockholders Individually Liable. as to best promute perspiration, then the tyranny of the social law which compels us to grasp the hand of a casual and very that acquaintance, and to give it the established vibration, is fully telt, and becomes and is staying or rather sleeping, at the almost insupportable. But the inconvergence of the practice of the himself of the tracking of th almost insupportable. But the inconvenience of the practice of shaking hands is not confined to the season of hot weather only. There is probably no mode of saturation commonly practised by any civilized nation which is so encompassed with difficulties and embarassments. The difficulty of making a correct bow is no doubt considerable. There is the difficulty of knowing how to bow; how to draw the artistic line between the unceremonious nod and SECOND NATIONAL BANK

These thrusters are a numerous class; and oddly enough their mode does not seem to give so much the mode does not seem to give so much offence as that of the tippers and fingerers.

More physically puinful, though ethically less injurious, is the mode of those who squeeze. This mode is chiefly practiced by Methodists, by fervid preachers of evangelical persuasions, and by other persons of power and piety. Torments are often suffered by small-boned or rheumatic men and by freell squeeze who have feel. Of all the kinds of shakers above described these elingers are undoubtedly the most pestilential; and when as is occasionally the case, they combine equeezing with clinging, they are There are very few people who do not purtake, in a greater or less degree, of one or more of these faults in hand-shaking. From the Pall Mail Gazette.

I was walking (says the correspondent of that journal) by the banks of the Loire, when I perceived a dog, something of a secter, troiting up and down by the water's edge. He went and came with uneven Manufaturers sometimes atopping short as if he were pondering some weighty matter. His proceedings roused my curiosity, and conceal-ing myself behind some young trees, I de-termined to watch him. The dog, who Cannot afford to be without them?

TWENTY-ONE YEAR NAP-A MEDICAL COMMITTEE EXAMINE THE YOUNG LADY. BUT ARRIVE AT NO CONCLUSION. From the Saturday Review.

From the St. Louis Republican, Oct. 10,

She was brought to this city last week, and is staying or rather sleeping, at the house of Mrs. Davis, on Walnut street, hetween Fifth and Sixth. The fact that

There is the difficulty of knowing how to bow; how to draw the artistic line between the unceremonious nod and the obsequence and—for people who aim at doing things in good forrathe difficulty of apportuning bloir angles of reverence to the different sexes, and to the different social positions, ages, and degrees of intimacy of persons in each sex. And there is also the difficulty of knowing when to bow. But all the difficulties that cluster round the bow are nothing compared to those that encompass the shaking of hands. The difficulty of knowing how to bow are, after all, only the difficulties that cluster round the best that attempt to do anything well; and difficulties of the same kind, not interior in degree, will be found to be set the practice of shaking hands. As for the difficulties of knowing when to bow, it is obvious that they must be at least doubled in the case of hand-shaking, for this simple reason, that that mode of salutation requires the consent and coperation of two persons to execute it.

If any person should be inclined to doubt whether hand-shaking is a difficult whether hand-shaking hands.

But it is very apt to give offence; and the most serious consequences have been known to ensue from its having been practised by a young author upon a critic whom he had mistaken for a rival writer. These persons who, failing to give the whole hand, nevertheless do not touch your hand with the tips of their fingers only, but finger it with the whole or more fingers, are called fingers. Then there are those who give the whole hand, but give it in a limp, flabby manner, as a Newfoundland dog gives its paw. These people seem to think they have discharged the whole duty of handshaking when hose of their highest it the custom to make our adieux to a dear departed by shaking hands with his corpse, the sensation would no doubt be very like what we experience when we salute these flabby shakers; who, as they use their hands much in the same way as the Mock Turtle used his flaps, may be called flappers. These negative modes of shaking hands are disagreeable enough. But the positive modes are still more unpleasant. Among these the least distressing is probably the thrusting mode. There are some people who, when you offer them your hand, take it; but take it only to put it from them, as it it were something common unclean. If, as in this case, the law interferes with its own license and its own irregularities, it sppeals not to the courts to set it aside. but to the mob to resist it unto blood. The N. Y. The whole power of the nation is to be weed, if necessary, for this purpose.

These provisions are too obviously with in the specified powers of Congress to admit the farment of a doubt. Most men will hear cavils after at St. Questin.

A government prohibited by its fundamental law from definding its own existence, whether against armed treason or a secre whother against armed treason or a secret conspiracy, would not be worth much The fact that it is a government gives it this right, and it is doubtful which exigency is the most pressing for its acrosse, the defence of the people's will by rebellion, or the forgery of the people's will by election frauds. It is certain that the against of constraint a state by the system of governing a state by "re-peaters" and 'ballot-bex-stuffers," which certain politicians are trying to establish in New York, is not "a republican form of government" such as C mgress is required to guaranty to every State, and if it should become a fixed tack here, the goneral government would have to be called on to put it down.
